STATE OF THE NWTF

Fiscal year 2023 marked the 50th Anniversary of the NWTF, and it was a year full of milestones. The organization's finances are in solid shape; our annual Convention and Sport Show in Nashville set records in attendance and vendor participation; we announced our largest-ever single year funding for wild turkey research; and we launched new initiatives focused on the wild turkey and the creation of healthy wildlife habitat.

To kick off 2023 and celebrate our 50th Anniversary, we intentionally set several ambitious goals for the year, including, but not limited to: positively impact 1 million acres of wildlife habitat; raise $500,000 for wild turkey research; grow our ranks to 250,000 adult members (recruit 75,000 new adult members); and dedicate $1 million to education and outreach (our Hunting Heritage programs). Due to the dedication of our members, volunteers and staff, we have experienced serious growth toward our membership goal and achieved all other goals laid out for the year.

Thanks to the full resumption of chapter fundraising activities and prudent financial management, the NWTF is in an even stronger financial position this year compared to the prior year. The number of local banquet events grew by 6.5% in 2023, and net revenue increased by 15% over 2022. We continued our goal of ensuring a solid financial footing for the organization by increasing cash reserves while expanding mission delivery.

We are achieving cost savings with last year's decision to transition to a third-party vendor to handle merchandise warehousing and fulfillment needs for local chapters' fundraising activities. This transition also allowed us to sell the warehouse facility and its associated acreage and invest net proceeds from the sale into strengthening and modernizing our mission delivery infrastructure.

Wild turkey populations are growing or sustaining in certain areas, while other areas are experiencing an unquestionable decline. Unfortunately, there is not a one-size-fits-all solution to why the decline is happening. This is why wild turkey research is critical.

Thanks to concerted fundraising by our organization, in June 2023, the NWTF was able to announce its largest-ever single year outlay of investments in wild turkey ecology research: $582,374 dispersed among 10 vital projects across nine states. With the inclusion of our partners' support, the NWTF's 2023 investment in wild turkey research will be leveraged to nearly $9 million. Add to that the funding by state chapters and national funding from last year, and we have contributed over $1.2 million, leveraged against more than $12 million, in the last 12 months for wild turkey research. This is tremendous!

While research is critical, we also know that loss of essential habitat is having an adverse effect on wild turkey numbers, especially in the Southeast and Mid-South states. That is why we have developed our new Habitat for the Hatch initiative. This landscape-scale initiative is laser-focused on creating nesting habitat and quality brood range in close proximity to each other. The initiative includes all or portions of Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

Habitat for the Hatch will be scaled to make a massive impact – 1 million acres of quality nesting and brood-rearing habitat, implemented based on current research efforts, in the next 10 years across public and private lands. The work of Habitat for the Hatch will result in more turkeys across the Southeast and beyond, plus overall healthier and more contiguous ecosystems.

At the beginning of this fiscal year (October 2022), the NWTF and the USDA Forest Service signed a landmark 20-year national master stewardship agreement. This first-of-its-kind agreement paves the way for NWTF and the Forest Service to work together to address the wildfire crisis in the West and promote healthy forests across the U.S. It also includes an initial $50 million commitment from the Forest Service.

Our partnership with the Forest Service is central to our mission. Wild turkeys, as well as other wildlife, rely on healthy habitats and healthy forests for their long-term sustainability. These mitigation efforts will benefit turkey habitats that are part of over 90 million acres of Forest Service lands.

While habitat work is essential, the preservation of our hunting heritage continues to be a critical part of NWTF's mission. Over the last 70 years, the population of the U.S. has nearly doubled. Yet the number of hunters has not kept pace with that growth. Our collective voice has, and is, continuing to shrink. And with it goes all the critical support and resources hunters and shooters provide to everyone who loves the outdoor lifestyle.

We are investing in research to understand more of the general public's perceptions of hunting and our shared hunting heritage. The NWTF is working with like-minded organizations and researchers on a national ad campaign – Hunt for Good – that is geared toward increasing participation and public support of hunting through various mediums which will target new audiences. The goal of this campaign is to connect with the nearly 80% of Americans who are receptive to the positive benefits hunting provides.

The Hunt for Good Project will provide insight into how we can effectively recruit more recreational hunting enthusiasts and create broader social acceptance for hunting. We look forward to using this research to engage new audiences.

This past February the NWTF National Convention and Sport Show in Nashville drew more than 67,000 sport show attendees – an all-time record. In addition to the sport show attendance record, the NWTF's golden anniversary celebration saw other records shattered, including the 512 exhibitors that set up booths on the show floor, the 2,000 individuals that attended the NWTF's Grand National Auction and numerous events that saw record-breaking fundraising.

NWTF's strengthened finances have allowed us to make strategic investments in our people and infrastructure to create a nimble, responsive organization. We've invested in our people, by making sure we are a competitive organization to attract and retain the best talent. We've flattened the organizational structure to match our co-CEO model and foster greater cross-team collaborations. We are investing in new business software and membership tools to modernize our organization and position us for greater success.

There has been much to celebrate during NWTF's 50th Anniversary year, but we're focused on the challenges and opportunities to prepare our organization for the next 50 years. We are developing a 10-year strategy to expand, deepen and strengthen mission-related activities under the Healthy Habitats. Healthy Harvests. umbrella, to double the number of active chapters, and increase the size of the NWTF family through both adult and youth membership.

This has been a year of abundance and a year of gratitude. You helped build the NWTF into what it is today, and we're proud of where the NWTF is heading in the next 50 years.

In Memoriam

ROBERT HIGGINBOTHAM

We want to take this opportunity to mourn the passing of Robert "Higgi" Higginbotham, 60, of Louisville, Mississippi, on March 2, 2023, after a battle with cancer. Higgi was a former president of the NWTF National Board of Directors and an enthusiastic supporter of NWTF's mission. He was a good friend and wise counselor to all of us at NWTF and is deeply missed.

Golden Goals

From a species at risk in the early 1900s to one whose numbers exceed 6 million today, the wild turkey has experienced a complete resurgence thanks to the work of the NWTF and its 220,000-plus members, volunteers and partners. This force for good hosts thousands of events and contributes millions of dollars and volunteer hours every year to create healthy habitats so all forests and wildlife can thrive year-round.

Fifty years after Tom Rodgers founded the Federation and began our mission, the NWTF is recognized as one of our country's most important leaders in conservation and hunting. During our golden anniversary, the pride and passion we all share became the impetus for greater collaboration and participation, extending our reach and impact. Our drive to preserve the love of this lifestyle triggered a new sense of purpose and belonging. Together, we made this our biggest year yet, and helped shape the future of conservation.

The Future of Conservation Has Begun

The NWTF's 50th Anniversary has become a catalyst for the next half century of conservation and our hunting heritage. By establishing and working toward our unprecedented Golden Anniversary goals over the past year (ending Dec. 31, 2023), we have pushed the limits on what we can accomplish in a single year. As of Nov. 1, 2023, our progress toward each goal is listed below.

Positively impact 1 million acres of wildlife habitat

We will lead nationwide conservation efforts.

To turn the tide of diminishing wild turkey populations, growing dangers of catastrophic wildfire, and other threats to our nation's vital watersheds, forests, grasslands and communities, we need to lead collaborative conservation efforts at local, state and regional levels, impacting areas equivalent to over 1,500 square miles.

Total as of Nov. 1: 950,000 acres positively impacted

Raise $500,000 for wild turkey research

States collaborate on research that benefits everyone.

Working across state boundaries with like-minded volunteers, we need to conduct critical wild turkey research that can help identify population threats as well as help our regional teams better collaborate on possible projects and initiatives.

Total as of Nov. 1: $582,374 invested in 10 research projects across nine states

*Denotes national Request for Proposals only

Increase membership to 250,000 members

Only 1 in 10 turkey hunters are active members of the NWTF.

Insufficient habitat management, the division and development of previously untouched lands, and a reduction of funding and resources has resulted in the loss of healthy habitat for the wild turkey and many other game and non-game species. It is critical that all hunters unite to conserve this iconic bird and the lifestyle we love.

Total as of Nov. 1: Membership increased to 226,302

Dedicate $1,000,000 for our Hunting Heritage programs

Introduce hunting and shooting sports to more people.

Each year NWTF chapters across the United States offer people opportunities to explore the outdoors through local hands-on events and hunts. Events are designed to pass on the traditions of safe, ethical hunting and teach conservation principles.

Total as of Nov. 1: $1,014,431.67

Invest in our people and modernize our IT infrastructure

Provide better tools for volunteers and members.

The NWTF has assembled a passionate team of individuals across the country through its dedicated staff and volunteers. By modernizing our organization and streamlining our IT infrastructure, we will ensure our people are the most efficient and effective at delivering on the NWTF mission.

Update as of Nov. 1: Ongoing fundraising effort that is being implemented in stages

Raise $5,000,000 to build $50,000,000 endowment

Continue our mission for the next 50 years.

Since 1973, the NWTF has been the national leader in the conservation of the wild turkey and the preservation of our hunting heritage. Establishing our endowment fund will help support all mission-related activities well into the future and ensure our mission continues for generations to come.

Total as of Nov. 1: $8,555,209

Wild Turkey Research

The NWTF has always been a research-driven organization. However, the unstable and declining wild turkey population across the country is cause for an aggressive investment to ensure wild turkeys remain a staple on the landscape for all who revere the bird. Since the organization's inception, the NWTF has contributed over $9.5 million to crucial wild turkey research projects. The combined commitment of our state chapters' Super Fund contributions and the NWTF's national investment in wild turkey research in 2022-2023 is more than $1.2 million.

Over a 12-month period in FY22-23, NWTF contributions, leveraged with matching partnership dollars, has totaled $12 million.

! Priority Investments in Research

The NWTF began making financial contributions toward wild turkey research in 1977 with an initial $2,900 to investigate wild turkey reproduction, poult survival, and movements and populations as well as general habitat types. Since that time, the NWTF has contributed more than $9.5 million, leveraged with partnership funding for a total of more than $45 million for wild turkey research.

In the past year alone, the NWTF has invested more than $582,000 into research across the country, leveraged to more than $9 million – 1/5th of the 50-year total in a single year!

Habitat for the Hatch

Habitat for the Hatch will be laser focused on creating essential nesting habitat in close proximity to quality brood range. This new initiative seeks to create 1 million acres that fit these specific criteria in the next 10 years.

Work for Habitat for the Hatch will occur on both public and private lands across the initiative's 18-state region. Where the NWTF has private-land staff in the initiative area, staff will work directly with private landowners to provide education, technical assistance and programs to help them increase nesting and brood-rearing habitat while also reaching other goals for their property.

Habitat for the Hatch will also support and utilize research that is at the forefront of addressing the Southeast's biggest conservation challenges. Working in unison with the NWTF Wild Turkey Technical Committee, the initiative will improve nesting and brood-rearing habitat supported by this key research in ways that result in favorable outcomes for wild turkey recruitment and overall landscape health.

Moreover, Habitat for the Hatch will bolster wild turkey populations while also underscoring how the NWTF's work for the wild turkey amplifies the organization's Four Shared Values while benefitting many other species. While Habitat for the Hatch is designed to ensure states across the Southeast are hatching more turkeys, many other species will 'hatch' from the efforts of the initiative, including insects, aquatic species, the imperiled gopher tortoise, red-cockaded woodpeckers, pollinators and more, all of which are indicators of healthy and resilient habitats.

The NWTF has conserved or enhanced more than 22 million acres of wildlife habitat since 1985.

Your Support is Crucial

The NWTF estimates a need of $40 million — with partner collaboration — by 2033 to improve over 1 million acres of nesting and brood-rearing habitat on public and private lands. The NWTF anticipates leveraging funds for the initiative at a minimum of 5:1. To accomplish this, the federation has an estimated fundraising goal of $8 million over the next 10 years.

The Habitat for the Hatch initiative area consists of NWTF's America's Mid-South Rebirth and America's Southern Piney Woods Big 6 Regions. Those regions include all or portions of Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

Wild Turkey Population Estimates

from 1973 Compared to Today (or Most Recent Population Estimate)

The NWTF has invested more than $500 million into wild turkey habitat conservation and more than $9.5 million in wild turkey research since its founding 50 years ago. In that period of time, the population of the wild turkey has grown from an estimated 1.3 million to more than 6 million.

Timber Transport

Work under the new 20-year national master stewardship agreement, with an initial investment of $50 million, between the NWTF and the USDA Forest Service began on March 29. The NWTF contracted with the California Deer Association to begin harvesting timber as part of a 2,746-acre timber removal project in the Klamath National Forest located in northern California.

The timber harvested in this project is set to embark on its journey by railcar — a method considered “old-fashioned” in today’s world of multi-modal transportation. However, the NWTF views this method of transportation through a lens that considers the ecological and social values of the work being done. With this timber transport pilot, the NWTF is testing a proof of concept that may create a new model for implementing the crucial work ahead.

Restoring forests to more appropriate tree densities is intended to create a forest and watershed that is more resilient to wildfire events, while improving wild turkey and other wildlife habitat on a wildfire burn-scarred landscape. This innovative pilot transports timber volumes that are in excess of local mill industry capacity to other areas that need the increased supply of timber to meet mill demand, while helping both the originating and receiving forests adhere to Forest Service timber harvest targets.

Once the groundwork is complete, forest products are transported by railcar as the second component of this multi-faceted approach to forest restoration. The logs must first be transported to Gilchrist Forest Products in Gilchrist, Oregon, where they undergo debarking to eliminate bark beetles. Subsequently, the debarked logs are inspected and transported to a railyard in Klamath Falls, Oregon, where they receive another inspection before being loaded onto railcars for transportation to Wyoming.

Once on railcars, the logs begin their nearly month-long journey to Devils Tower Forest Products Inc. in Hulett, Wyoming. This small-town community relies heavily on the Black Hills sawmill as a critical economic driver.

Wildfire Crisis Strategy

This work is a component of the Wildfire Crisis Strategy, which the Forest Service formally announced in January 2022. Two years into the 10-year effort, the Wildfire Crisis Strategy is implementing a scaled-up, cross-boundary approach to reduce 20 million acres of hazardous fuels on Forest Service lands and up to 30 million acres beyond Forest Service lands with an array of agency, tribal and conservation partners. The NWTF has worked with the Forest Service in both developmental and implementational capacities on the strategy.

Waterways for Wildlife

The NWTF's Waterways for Wildlife initiative kicked off another year of vital restoration work in and around water corridors by funding 20 conservation projects throughout nine of the initiative's 10 focal states in 2023. The NWTF is contributing $225,000 to these critical projects, which will be leveraged with partners to more than $5.3 million this year alone.

Waterways for Wildlife addresses urgent conservation needs in riparian ecosystems, or areas situated along creeks, streams and rivers, which are magnets for wild turkeys and many other wildlife species. Bridging the gap between water quantity and the quality of available water, these essential ecosystems store water and recharge aquifers; likewise, the plants, soils and wetlands associated with them serve to filter pesticides, herbicides and sediment before they travel into downstream water supplies.

However, many of these riparian habitats are in poor condition due to various causes – such as increased water demands, disrupted floodplains and changes in land use – that have altered their natural cycle and impacted the health of these essential communities. Through the Waterways for Wildlife Initiative, the NWTF is committed to reversing these trends and implementing work to improve riparian health for wild turkeys and the many other land-dwelling and aquatic species that rely on these ecosystems.

The initiative began in 2022, and significant headway was made through 14 shovel-ready projects, impacting 7,677 acres of wildlife habitat and nearly 80 stream miles.

Over the next nine years, the NWTF seeks to raise $10 million in private funding and leverage $40 million in matching partner funds to improve 75,000 acres of wildlife habitat along 1,500 linear miles of waterways in the Great Plains landscape.

Education & Outreach

There are many accomplishments in the NWTF Education and Outreach Programs to reflect on in 2023.

We began to see our education and outreach efforts grow rapidly after COVID-19 stifled so much of our work in previous years. We are seeing the fruits of rebuilding and reconnecting. People are getting outdoors in record numbers and chapters are seeing full capacity events and hunts. We set lofty goals, as much as a 40% increase in efforts, and we reached them!

The Education and Outreach team attended the National R3 Symposium in Albuquerque, New Mexico in May. While at the conference we heard a surprising report. Since 1995 Responsive Management has conducted a yearly study to gauge Americans' attitudes toward legal, ethical, hunting and target shooting. Historically 80% of the population has supported legal hunting, this number has declined to 77% which is a statistically significant decline.

While some will argue that the decline in hunters is inevitable, and will be nearly impossible to tackle, building support for hunting is equally important. We want voters to uphold our right to hunt, even if they choose not to participate.

NWTF has been at the forefront of advocacy for hunting and the shooting sports since our inception. Partnering with Responsive Management, we assisted in the development of a single, cohesive marketing campaign designed to increase cultural support for hunting across the U.S. We have just completed a soft launch to test the campaign. Our next step will be to launch the campaign on a state level in partnership with the Northeast Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies. The website, www.huntforgood.com, is the hub for the campaign. Included are art assets as well as content and links that connect site visitors to national and state-level resources designed to formally introduce nonhunters to the outdoors and, eventually, hunting and shooting.

The time to come together is now. Every opportunity we have to pass on our heritage and to provide others with opportunities to learn to hunt is as important as the next, and we each must do our part to pass on the traditions of hunting and shooting. As you will see in our future work, the NWTF continues to be a leader in education and outreach, and recruitment, retention and reactivation of hunters and shooters.

A Year of Reaching New Audiences

As we shift into the next 50 years of our organization, there is optimism for much-anticipated growth and our hope is the continuation of bringing new audiences into our community. We have set goals to reach diverse audiences across urban landscapes, collegiate programming and new avenues. Education and outreach, specifically R3 (Recruitment, Retention and Reactivation) research has noted the need for innovative and adaptive approaches. The focus of our past year indicates the NWTF can set a precedent to lead with those values in mind and be marked by our new inventive endeavors.

Washington State NWTF and First Hunt Foundation Team Up

In April the Washington State NWTF and First Hunt Foundation teamed up to provide 30 new turkey hunters a three-day mentored hunt experience at Bear Paw Camp near Newport. Participants came from urban and rural communities, representing diverse backgrounds and ranged from 12 to 62 years of age. The only requirement for participation was that they were new to turkey hunting, had never harvested a bird and did not have family or friends who could help them learn. Mentors and new hunters met and went over shotgun patterning, field setups and calling sessions, to instruction on outdoor survival, turkey hunting basics, equipment, calls and hunting safety, and current laws. Nearly half of the participants harvested a bird. L.L. Bean sponsored a portion of the event.

National Leadership Conference

The National Leadership Conference in June saw the NWTF host many of its volunteer leaders at Bass Pro Shops' Big Cedar Lodge in Missouri. This event, which takes place

The NWTF has raised and invested more than half a billion dollars into wildlife conservation, research and hunting heritage outreach and education.

every three years, is an opportunity for the NWTF to provide important updates about the future of the organization and provide educational sessions that better enable NWTF faithful to carry out mission-related activities and conservation work in the field. Presentations covered a wide variety of topics around NWTF mission delivery, hosting events and ways to help share the good works of the NWTF.

It provided a great opportunity to share with volunteers from all over the country the recent findings regarding hunting and target shooting from the Responsive Management Report. America's demographics are changing. According to new census data, by 2035 there will be more older adults than kids and more urbanites with the bulk of population growth due to immigration.

In the face of such shifts in our society, we are poised for opportunities to meet these challenges. Our volunteer base is continuing to reach adults, urban and underserved audiences with educational and outreach options to engage in hunting and shooting sports. Many events provide basic information on hunting, while some teach specific game hunting followed by a mentored hunt. Outreach events within all NWTF programs have a long history of teaching shooting sports, and we have found that this can be a perfect segue to hunting for those who are interested.

Why We're Fighting for More Voices

In less than three decades, attitudes toward hunting and our outdoor lifestyle have changed.

10 million Decrease in Americans who approve of hunting since 1995.

8 million Decrease in Americans who approve of target shooting.

13 million Increase in Americans who disapprove of hunting.

15.5 million Increase in Americans who disapprove of target shooting.

National Leadership Conference Takeaways

Jon Joyner

Virginia NWTF
State Chapter president

The National Leadership Conference was a great experience for me and the other volunteer leaders from Virginia that were able to attend. It connected us with so many great thought-leaders from across the country who shared ideas on how to make each other stronger and more effective volunteers. We shared ideas on how to grow chapters, expand outreach and build partnerships in our local communities, which we believe helps build on our success and makes other individuals or entities want to get involved to be part of the future of our team. We look forward to putting these ideas to work in our state to help launch us into the next 50 years!

volunteers to NLC (average age: 31). I think they came back very inspired. Understanding how to appeal to the different generations was eye-opening as well as learning about nontraditional events to fundraise. The ability to change and adapt is going to be important to the organization moving forward.

Louis Gambale

Former New Jersey NWTF
State Chapter president

I found the conference to be beneficial to the volunteers for many reasons. Getting together in person with a blended audience from staff and volunteers fostered some great communication and opportunities. The subject matter supported how well we are focused on our organization's strategic direction for years to come. Headquarters hit the mark on key points of the mission. The session on generational behavior was great. The ongoing commitment to research and the work post(-research) really set well with the attendees.

The NWTF embarked on a partnership with Agents of Discovery to provide new innovative and inclusive learning opportunities for our members to connect virtually to our organization. Through their cutting-edge technology, we have 'missions' that challenge users via their use of the app on mobile devices, to engage with the natural world. We were able to kick off this partnership at the National Convention where users, specifically targeted towards youth, were invited to answer questions on their 'missions' that pertain specifically to wild turkey conservation and the history of our organization. This new interface allows us the opportunity to change challenges quarterly to continue to introduce new audiences to faucets of our organization through their desire to connect virtually. Finding a way to meet youth and the public in a virtual environment will help us continue to move the needle in our outreach efforts for the non-traditional audiences or technologically minded members of our community.

Internships

Over the past summer, Mackena Rhadigan, a Michigan State University fisheries and wildlife conservation biology student, embarked on a transformative journey through the Glassen Scholars Internship with the NWTF. This unique opportunity allowed her to dive deep into the world of hunter recruitment, retention and reactivation (R3) across Michigan, a side of conservation she had not explored before.

Raised in Detroit, Michigan, Rhadigan had early experiences with hunting that later waned; however, her passion for natural resources and wildlife conservation led her to pursue her chosen field of study.

Rhadigan's summer internship with the NWTF was an unmitigated success, yielding a wealth of knowledge about hunting's profound impact on the conservation world.

As she reflected on her 12-week journey, Rhadigan said, "I have learned more than I ever imagined I would about hunting and the tremendous impact it has on the conservation world."

Her dedication and innovative ideas have undoubtedly laid the groundwork for a brighter future in R3 efforts, ensuring that Michigan's natural resources continue to thrive through the engagement of diverse and enthusiastic participants.

Federal Policy

Fiscal Year 2022-23 saw the end of the 117th Congress with single-party leadership to the 118th Congress with deeply divided chambers — one Democrat-led; the other Republican-led. This shift in Congressional control has changed the dynamic of creating and passing legislation, with generally swift passage of priority party bills in the single-party structure transitioning to a slow trudge for a divided Congress. With even more division within the House's Republican majority party, there is an exceedingly challenging environment to move important conservation-related bills. But even with current struggles, it's said that a divided Congress passes bills that last.

The 118th Congress has been busy nonetheless, with the 2023 Farm Bill, appropriations and the National Defense Authorization Act at the top of the list of priorities for most of 2023. For the NWTF, the farm bill is one of the most important pieces of legislation because it is the largest vehicle for private and working lands conservation in addition to its importance relating to food security and support for farmers and ranchers who feed our nation.

NWTF staff has been working on the Farm Bill for nearly two years, identifying our internal priorities that help us meet our own mission, and working with coalitions, such as the Forests in the Farm Bill and the Theodore Roosevelt Conservation Partnership's Policy Council, to set national priorities for wildlife and natural resource management.

In this effort, NWTF staff has met with Congressional leaders and their staff numerous times to help guide and support the Conservation and Forestry titles of the Farm Bill. The NWTF, the National Association of State Foresters and the Society of American Foresters hosted a virtual congressional briefing aimed at educating congressional staff in the Senate and House on the history of the Conservation and Forestry titles and their importance to the resilience and conservation of our nation's forests, wildlife habitat, water and soil.

Other key legislation includes:

- The Recovering America's Wildlife Act of 2023, which barely failed to pass last Congress, has been introduced in the Senate, and at the time of this writing, a House draft is underway. Even if the two bills are starkly different, the passage of nearly any version that helps states address at-risk species will move the needle in the right direction.
- The American Outdoor Recreation Act of 2023 was introduced in the Senate as an omnibus of a number of bills aimed at directing and funding improvements to outdoor recreation infrastructure on public lands as well as easing public access through permitting reform for outfitters, concessioners and the public.

- Following national news reporting of the U.S. Department of Education cutting federal funding to schools that have hunter education, archery and shooting sports programs, the NWTF activated our membership to write letters and call their representatives in Congress to pass a bipartisan fix. We explained how the language included in the Bipartisan Safer Communities Act of 2022 was intended to address Congressional concerns over arming and training educators and other school staff and was never intended to impact school enrichment programs like hunter education, archery and shooting sports programs. In a tremendous win for students, hunters and recreational shooters, bills passed both chambers nearly unanimously, with only one House member opposing. The president signed the Protecting Hunting Heritage and Education Act into law in October.

- The House Natural Resources Committee approved the Forest Information Reform (FIR) Act, a bill that NWTF has publicly supported. Introduced by Rep. Matt Rosendale (R-MT), this bill is one solution to address the Cottonwood precedent, which currently forces unnecessary, forest-plan level consultation onto the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the USDA Forest Service. The Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee approved its companion bill, S. 1540, sponsored by Sen. Steve Daines (R-MT), which the NWTF also supports.

- The House Natural Resources Committee also approved the Forest Protection and Wildland Firefighter Safety Act of 2023, sponsored by Rep. Doug LaMalfa (R-CA) and 30 additional bipartisan cosponsors. The legislation would protect the use of aerial fire retardants by the Forest Service when fighting wildfires.

- Also on the House side, the Natural Resources Committee approved the Save Our Sequoias Act, led by former Speaker Kevin McCarthy (R-CA) and Rep. Scott Peters (D-CA). This particular bill authorizes fuels reduction

50 Years of Conservation Recognized Nationally

The following states, with the guidance of NWTF state chapters and volunteers, passed some form of recognition of the NWTF's 50th Anniversary in fiscal year 2023:

Alabama, Arizona, Delaware, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Massachusetts,

Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, North Dakota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Virginia, Vermont, Washington, Wisconsin, West Virginia and Wyoming

treatments in giant sequoia groves on federal lands in the state of California and also includes reforms for environmental review requirements.

- The Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee approved the Root and Stem Project Authorization Act of 2023, sponsored by Sen. Daines (R-MT) and had good bipartisan support. This bill would give the Forest Service clear authorization to engage in what is commonly known as the "A to Z" Stewardship contracts.

As you can see, even though the 118th Congress had its challenges to overcome, we are seeing meaningful lawmaking in the works and will continue to monitor those that have implications, good or bad, for our mission and our members.

To become more engaged in the NWTF's policy efforts, we ask our members to watch for Action Alerts coming through email and on the NWTF's social media channels and to take action to help us preserve our mission and our traditions.

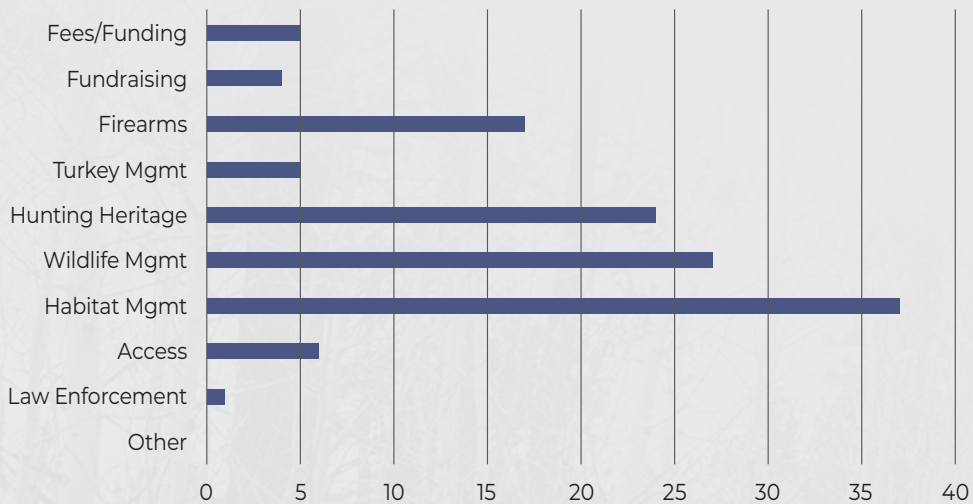

State Policy

Over the past fiscal year, NWTF staff actively monitored 140 bills and regulations, while NWTF state chapters were engaged in a total of 44 bills, weighing in to support or oppose. Of the 44 issues the NWTF chose to engage in, there was a favorable disposition approximately 43% of the time and an unfavorable disposition approximately 36% of the time. The remainder of the bills are still active and do not have a disposition at this time.

Summary of 2022-23 Policy Activities

Policy Issues

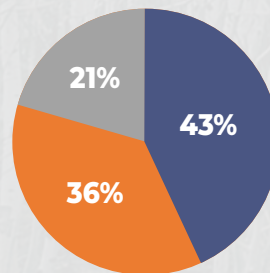

Policy Engagement

■ POSITION ■ NO POSITION

Policy Outcomes

■ FAVORABLE ■ UNFAVORABLE ■ IN PROGRESS

East Region

The NWTF Mississippi State Chapter supported wild turkey regulation changes which were approved. In Maine, the state chapter opposed a bill that would have made wild turkey bag limits the same as ruffed grouse, and fortunately, that bill was defeated. In New York, the NWTF supported allowing 12- to 13-year-olds to hunt big game with a firearm; the legislature approved extending the sunset of that authority to 2025. NWTF also engaged in and supported a bill in Pennsylvania that would allow nonresident college students to purchase resident licenses to encourage hunting.

Central Region

In the Central Region, it was a busy policy year, although the NWTF elected to weigh in on fewer bills and regulatory issues than past years for a variety of reasons. We saw success in the hunting heritage arena, keeping public lands accessible in Wisconsin. We also saw success in the wildlife management arena, supporting state agency partners seeking regulatory changes to address wild turkey declines. However, we weren't successful in some efforts to support budget increases for state wildlife agencies where they are needed.

West Region

The West saw several bills that created permits, training, waiting periods and other requirements related to purchasing and possessing firearms. Most of those bills passed, and a number are being litigated. The NWTF did a lot of work behind the scenes, working for amendments to these bills. Wildlife Commission reform is an issue across the West, and the NWTF will be watching multiple ballot initiatives in 2024. In particular, Oregon's IP 3 aims to criminalize hunting, fishing and trapping, among other agricultural practices. In Colorado, a petition to ban mountain lion and bobcat hunting is being circulated for signature.

Financials

A Year of Celebration

The NWTF had much to celebrate in fiscal year 2023. The fiscal year coincided with our 50th Anniversary and was filled with numerous highlights, including a record-setting annual Convention and Sports Show, our largest investment in wild turkey research in NWTF history, delivering on a landmark national agreement with the USDA Forest Service, and launching the Habitat for the Hatch initiative.

These investments in our mission were made possible due to another strong financial year for the organization. All across the country, our volunteers hosted phenomenal fundraising events, we continued to grow and diversify other revenue streams, strategically divested of land assets, optimized our business model, and established a fully functional endowment ensuring the long-term sustainability of the NWTF.

This year, more than 88% of the NWTF's expenditures were invested in activities that support our mission. Furthermore, these funds are matched many times over to create an even bigger impact for the wild turkey, other wildlife, habitat, hunting and people. Thanks to the support of our volunteers, members, partners and staff, we embark on the next 50 years stronger than ever and ready to reach new heights.

88% of every dollar is invested in activities that support our mission

- Contributions to the 2023 NWTF National Research Program were matched 15-to-1, generating nearly $9 million for wild turkey research.
- Contributions to the Hunt for Good Campaign were matched 16.6-to-1 in FY23, increasing our national reach to educate and inform potential new hunters and outdoorsmen/women.

- Contributions to the NWTF Waterways for Wildlife Initiative were matched 17.8-to-1 this past year, a massive win for riparian habitats and the wild turkeys and many other wildlife species that use them.

Corporate Partner Spotlight

Partnerships Move the Mission

Working together to achieve a shared goal is the basis for a corporate partnership. A true partnership is more than just a transaction. Each party brings value to the other, cares about each other's success and develops ways to help the other reach their goals. Throughout the NWTF's 50 years, we have enjoyed the support of over 100 partners contributing over $40 million to help deliver on our mission.

The NWTF's top life-to-date corporate supporters are Bass Pro Shops/Cabela's and Mossy Oak, who work tirelessly to find innovative ways to further our mission. Whether through major support of our conservation delivery, wild turkey research, at our annual convention, or the numerous other ways each supports the NWTF, we are grateful to align with partners who share and support our mission.

In 2023 alone, Bass Pro Shops/Cabela's contributed over $500,000 to our conservation efforts, continued the ever-popular $25 Bass Pro Shops/Cabela's gift card program as one of NWTF's membership incentives, invited chapters to participate in local store events in the Spring and Fall, and hosted the NWTF's National Leadership Conference at Big Cedar Resort, just to name a few. At our annual NWTF Convention and Sport Show, Bass Pro donated a Sun Tracker Pontoon to our Grand National Auction that raised more than $60,000.

As our convention title sponsor, Mossy Oak has continued to fund wild turkey research, collaborate with the NWTF on mutual partnerships, and added momentous excitement to the 2023 NWTF Convention and Sport Show by launching the Mr. Fox turkey vest on the opening day of the show. Not only that, Mossy Oak also donated the No. 5 vest to the NWTF's Grand National Auction, where it raised more than $30,000.

Our Corporate Conservation Circle

All corporate partners who have achieved life-to-date support of $20,000 or more through our fiscal year end are listed in our Corporate Conservation Circle. The NWTF Corporate Conservation Circle recognizes financial support through contracted marketing and corporate sponsorship programs, separate from our philanthropic Major Donor program. These partners and their contributions are a vital part of mission delivery.

"If this organization can prolong the life cycle of the wild turkey even for one extra day, then all the time, effort and money expended will have been worthwhile."
